BEAUFORT BAR

This was once the stage used by the tail-coated, bow-tied players of the Savoy Havana Band and Savoy Orpheans.
Led by regulars Rudy Vallee and Carroll Gibbons with visitors such as George Gershwin, they were broadcast live by the newly formed BBC in the 1920s, thus becoming famous throughout the land.

The stage was also the focal point for the evergreen ‘Stomping at The Savoy’ dinner dances, named after the Benny Goodman tune that in fact celebrated the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem, New York.
