Qiviuk

"A fibre softer, finer and warmer than Cashmere."

Qiviuk is the inner down of the Canadian Arctic Muskox. It is a fiber of exceptional quality, noticeably softer and lighter than cashmere, and 8 times warmer than wool. The Muskox is one of the Arctic's most valuable resources. Because of their shaggy coats, muskoxen appear to be massive animals; in fact, they rarely grow more than chest high to a human. In May, when arctic temperature begins to rise, muskoxen shed their inner coats, and the tundra becomes littered the precious fleece. For more information, please visit www.qiviuk.com
