Afternoon Tea at the Princess

In the 1840s Anna, The 7th Duchess of Bedford, felt the need to have a small snack of fresh hot tea and thinly sliced bread and butter served to her, in secret, in her boudoir by a butler.

When she realized she was not ridiculed she became encouraged to entertain her friends and house guests in this way, and so afternoon tea was born.

Afternoon Tea was generally served around 3pm to 4pm and consisted of small dainty sandwiches with various fillings of cucumber, egg, chicken and even sardine then followed by small pastries of seasonal fruits and slices of Madeira and fruit cakes and not forgetting the fruit scone with strawberry preserves and the ever popular Devonshire clotted cream.

All of this washed down with fresh hot tea, the milk was poured first as this will stop the very hot tea from cracking the fine china. It was the highest honour if the pot was placed in front of you to pour.

Here at Fairmont Hamilton Princess we are very proud to carry on this fine British tradition of serving our award winning afternoon tea, voted one of the best top 10 in the world, in our popular Heritage Court and is great favourite of locals and tourists.

A Brief Heritage of Tea

Tea is taken around the world and its influence spans cultural as well as economic boundaries. It has played a vital role in world politics, wars, literature, romance and cuisine. It has been ascribed a spiritual and mystical connection to the soul in the East, while in the West it has been considered in turn to be an evil liquor, a medicinal cure for almost any ailment and a symbol of imperial oppression.

To many, tea is the nectar of life.
