The Diplomat Club's creation was inspired by the over 75 Consul General Missions in the Bay Area, with the aim of offering a dedicated setting where they would be able to utilize The Fairmont San Francisco and its services as a "home away from home." In order to transform the the 3,700 square foot space, updated furniture and international décor were brought in along with historical photos from diplomatic visits, which are displayed throughout the Club. Located on the Arcade level of the hotel directly across from its Intersect Media Lounge, the Diplomat Club not only offers an elegant setting for meetings and business-related events, but also functions as an ideal venue for a social soiree, boasting a full bar, dining area, billiard room and private dining room.

Since 1907, The Fairmont has served as the San Francisco residence for U.S. presidents, world leaders and entertainment stars. Often referred to as "The White House of the West" or "Residence of Presidents", The Fairmont San Francisco has been the official home base for the San Francisco Consular Corps for many years and has celebrated a number of the most important and memorable occasions tied to diplomatic endeavors. In 1945, The United Nations Charter was drafted in the hotel's Garden Room and its famed Penthouse Suite was used by U.S. Secretary of State Edward Stettinius as his headquarters during the United Nations Convention.
