Berkeley

Situated to the north-east of San Francisco, Berkeley is one of Northern California's hidden gems. With stunning views of the Bay Area and the Golden Gate bridge, you will not be disappointed by all that Berkeley has to offer.

With a large population, Berkeley is an affluent city that draws in many young professionals from across the globe. Home to the world's leading public research university (University of California), the city boasts many award-winning museums, galleries and theaters to enrich your visit.

Birthplace of the 1960's Free Speech Movement, you'll find those hippy roots still run deep through Berkeley's veins. Its many boutiques and independent shops make for a unique shopping experience that is a world away from your typical malls and main street stores.

Lastly, if you enjoy spending time outdoors you will love the stunning parks and areas of natural beauty dotted around the city. At Berkeley marina you will find a panoply of activities from fishing and sailing to adventure playgrounds; there's something to satisfy all ages and tastes.

Welcome to the Claremont!

In its 100+ years, our hotel hasn't skipped a beat. It has housed many service men, dignitaries, families and the local community.

The Claremont is the largest wooden structure east of the Mississippi River. This grande dame of Berkeley has had multiple facelifts during her years. Having worked here for nearly 33 years now, I personally have seen several renovations, and the latest one is the best yet.

I'm known as the "Eloise" of the Claremont (based on the children's book series written in the 1950s by Kay Thompson) because I was born and raised in Berkeley, and the Claremont was my "playground."

Growing up around the hotel, I always encountered employees helping others and saw the benefits of being helpful. From this, I made it my mission to help people, too. I have always enjoyed assisting people by telling them where to go, what to do and how to get there. Over the years, I have cultivated valuable friendships with guests and colleagues alike.

As a concierge, I come to work ready to answer requests, from the easiest to the most challenging. I invite you to come see us at the concierge desk, where we can help you turn your moments into memories!

In friendship,

Jennifer Cirelli

University of California Botanical Gardens

For those seeking a more flowery experience, the University of California Botanical Gardens at Berkeley is a mere 10-minute drive from the Fairmont. This sprawling, 34-acre site contains one of the largest collections of rare and endangered plant species in the country, all on view for visitors seeking a placid sojourn through pleasantly fragrant greenery.

The Garden's 130-year history has built a venerable legacy of preservation and education as guests enjoy the thousands of blooms and sprouts situated within the Strawberry Canyon location.

Organized by global geographic zones, patrons can literally walk from one continent to another, as different areas represent Africa, Asia, Europe, Australia, the Americas, and – of course – a robust section reserved for native California chaparral. Colorful orchids are lovingly cultivated for a veritable rainbow of floral displays. Sections dedicated to cacti harken to the arid regions where these water-bearers thrive.

While many of the gardens are outdoors, lining meticulously maintained walking trails, there are also greenhouses to wander into. There's even a collection of traditional Chinese medicinal herbs, many of which have been confirmed to be efficacious even by Western science standards. But watch out for the carnivorous plant displays! They won't bite your fingers, but if you're a fly, you could be in trouble! The Botanical Gardens are a tranquil place, as suitable for romantic afternoons as they are for family outings or even a private meditative exploration. Breathe it all in. It'll stay with you long after you leave.

Tilden Regional Park

Situated between the Berkeley Hills and the San Pablo Ridge is the 2,000-acre Tilden Regional Park. Driving from the Fairmont will get you there in just 15 minutes, but it's truly its own separate world. This is pure California hill hiking at its finest. Hugging the northeastern limits of the city, there are plenty of trails including a famous boardwalk that runs alongside Wildcat Creek. In the center of the park is Lake Anza, which is open for swimming from May to September.

Naturally, the area is loaded with picnic grounds and multi-purpose areas for all sorts of outdoor activities. Don't be surprised if you spot wildlife in the woods. Dog lovers will be happy to know our best friends are welcome in most parts of the park.

Beyond the natural wonders, there are some pretty cool human-made activities, too. The Tilden Park Golf Course is an 18-hole public course that's been in operation since 1937. Kids will love the merry-go-round, a genuine antique from 1912 that spent some time down the coast in Los Angeles and Ocean Beach before settling in Tilden Park.

There's even a charming miniature train. Redwood Valley Railway offers children and adults alike a wonderful 12-minute ride on 15-inch gauge tracks. The scaled-down steam engine travels along a scenic ridge and, as the name implies, past some majestic redwood trees.

Tilden Regional Park is a place to refresh weary travelers seeking an escape from urban centers and a reconnection with nature – all within a very short reach from both the resort and downtown Berkeley. Having such a sanctuary so close to civilization only adds to the magic of the region and makes guests' stays that much more rewarding.

César E. Chávez Park

One of the many popular destinations near the Marina, the City of Berkeley has preserved this 90-acre area for multipurpose uses. Picnic areas allow friends and family to gather for food and fun. Hiking trails, which are also wheelchair accessible, offer panoramic views of the nearby hills as well as the San Francisco skyline. The northern end of the park is a wildlife sanctuary where patient watchers might catch a glimpse of local denizens of the land and sea. There is also a robust kite-flying culture, culminating in the annual Kite Festival every July. Invigorating and welcoming, the park is the perfect place for short strolls and long afternoons alike.

Protected wetlands preserve safe habitats for birds and fish to thrive. Hear It, See It:

Music and Theater in Berkeley

The arts have a long and fabled history in the Berkeley area. Not far from the epicenter of San Francisco's hippie culture in the 60s, legendary bands from that era like the Grateful Dead and Bob Dylan paved the way for modern acts like Adele and John Legend to perform in the area's thriving music scene. Less known, perhaps, is the vibrant live theater tradition, catering to everything from the classics and post-modern experimental works to more traditional musicals and Broadway fare. And while Los Angeles may be the world capital for all things movies, Berkeley has a formidable cinema presence of its own. After all, directorial titans such as Francis Ford Coppola and George Lucas call the Bay Area their homes.

When considering music, perhaps the most venerable setting would be The Greek Theater. This is one of the core venues where the Grateful Dead famously cut their teeth back in their heyday. Located on the U.C. Berkeley campus, the outdoor amphitheater offers exquisite views of the Golden Gate Bridge and greater San Francisco. If classical music and dance are more your speed, Zellerbach Hall hosts magnificent concerts and performances.

But beyond the big-name venues, the city boasts dozens of fantastic clubs and theaters for live music. Intimate pubs and ballrooms offer up indie artists emerging from local and global scenes and provide smaller settings for established artists seeking to connect more closely with fans. On any given night, serious music lovers will have plenty of options to feed their ears with some awesome tunes.

Other pleasant surprises await those seeking a different kind of performing arts experience in the Berkeley area. A robust theater scene permeates the East Bay, bringing great masterworks to life. The Bard remains alive and well just outside of the city limits at the California Shakespeare Theater, lovingly known by locals as Cal Shakes. Visitors lucky enough to land in town during the on-season will relish powerful dramatic productions by Shakespeare and other classic playwrights.

For a more intimate setting, the Aurora Theater is a cozy venue that mounts modern works exclusively featuring local talent. Of course, fans of traditional musicals might want to check out the Berkeley Playhouse's productions of Broadway classics. Many other troupes within the city are singing and dancing into audiences' hearts, and even more venturing just outside the Berkeley borders. Guests are encouraged to set out and explore the wealth of live performances.

Finally, it cannot be left unsaid that Berkeley happens to be an important stop for cinephiles. Contemporary theaters are plentiful, showing everything from major studio releases to art house films and indie movies. And for those who get excited about seeing off-beat new works or beloved old movies on the big screen, check out the calendar at the Rialto Elmwood Theater. This is the place to see the hard-to-find stuff that most audiences miss.

The greatest cinematic treasure of all in town may well be The U.C. Berkeley Art Museum and Pacific Film Archive (BAMPFA). Part of California's robust public university system, BAMPFA is a mecca for serious movie hounds, home to hundreds of rare film programs and exhibitions showcasing the very best of world filmmaking. Visitors can screen classic features and attend lectures by some of the industry's leading figures. It's also housed within a unique architectural structure, making the trip enjoyable on many levels at once. Get ready for the lights to dim and the imagination to soar in this one-of-a-kind cinematic destination. Don't be surprised when you discover that Berkeley can give Hollywood a run for its money.
