AFTERNOON TEA HISTORY

The storied tradition of afternoon tea began in 1840 in England when the seventh Duchess of Bedford complained of “having that sinking feeling” around 4pm. At the time it was usual for people to take only two main meals a day, breakfast, and dinner at around 8 o'clock in the evening. So she began to order tea with bread, butter and cake to her room. Soon enough, she invited her friends to enjoy it with her. By the 1880s, afternoon tea had become a high fashion event served in the drawing room with silver teapots, fine linens, elegant teacups, and world-renowned teas

HIGH TEA OR AFTERNOON TEA ?

Afternoon Tea was initially developed as a private social event for ladies who climbed the echelons of society. It was only when Queen Victoria engaged in the Afternoon Tea ritual that it became a formal occasion on a larger scale, known as ‘tea receptions’.

High Tea originated during the Industrial Revolution for workers who returned home after a long hard day of physical labour. By that hour, tea was typically served with hot, hearty dishes. Now known as “supper” or “dinner”, this meal was often more filling and accompanied by a pot of strong tea.

The first tea shipment to arrive in Canada was imported by the Hudson’s Bay Company in 1716 and took more than a year to arrive!

“YES, THAT’S IT! SAID THE HATTER WITH A SIGH, IT’S ALWAYS TEA TIME.”

- Lewis Carroll, Alice in Wonderland
